JENNIFER SEELEY

SAN FRANCISCO STREET GALLERY

Jennifer Seeley is a Utah-based artist known for her vibrant animal portraits, created primarily in acrylic on canvas. Her work celebrates the beauty and energy of living creatures, brought to life through bold color, expressive texture, and a dynamic sense of movement.

She received her BFA in drawing and painting from Utah State University and has developed a practice centered on both technical exploration and a deep personal connection to her subject matter. In recent years, Seeley has incorporated palette knife techniques into her process, allowing for a balance of spontaneity and control that adds depth and character to each piece.

Her work often involves a combination of additive and subtractive methods-applying layers of paint and then scraping them back to reveal underlying textures and tones. This approach creates a sense of discovery within the surface, as subtle hues build toward moments of vivid color.

A strong connection to nature is central to Seeley's work. She spends time outdoors each day observing the landscape and wildlife, drawing inspiration from the Utah wilderness that surrounds her. This direct engagement with the natural world informs her paintings, giving them both authenticity and a sense of vitality.
